Marcus Lindstrøm heads the Construction team at Brækhus. He specialises in dispute resolution and litigation and has considerable expertise in construction law. Marcus assists major Norwegian and international businesses. He has litigated everything from smaller construction cases to larger and more complex processes for development projects, which have involved numerous actors and significant disputed amounts.

Marcus has in-depth expertise in various standard contracts used in the construction industry. He has extensive experience with advisory services for contract entry, follow-up, and mediation during project implementation.

As a lawyer, Marcus has a strong interest in litigation. He regularly litigates cases before the courts in other areas including trade and agency, tort law, and professional liability, as well as cases regarding temporary injunctions and arrests. Marcus has excellent project management skills and puts together teams that work systematically and efficiently.

Marcus was ranked as an up-and-coming within Construction law by Finansavisen's annual Lawyers Survey.
